

1. A little background: my current portfolio site pitches me as a small business. Collapsing that, I'm just pitching me, be that to an employer or to a client, without the pretense of a business.

2. The trend I'm seeing, 90% of the website is the homepage, all the content accessed as the user scrolls down is a single page vs. navigating to other areas of the site.

3. From this single page, seven projects/clients would be displayed like an accordion, folding and expanding projects on clicks.

4. A few extras, mobile responsive and Twitter integration. Meaning for example, the images would stack vs. display left to right.

5. Simple.
